

Gweles

NEW INDEPENDENT QUARTERLY MAGAZINE

MAJORITY CONTENT IN CORNISH

FROM SEPTEMBER 2021

Gweles will be a broad-based magazine about life in Cornwall. We intend to publish articles about the people of Cornwall. About the kaleidoscope of culture in Cornwall. Articles examining social issues. And commenting on current affairs. The magazine will not have any political affiliation.

Gweles will employ Cornish as a living language of Cornwall. The magazine will engage with people eager to use good Cornish every day with confidence.

Gweles will have its own integrated website. For background reading. For relevant links. For vocabulary specific to each article in Cornish. For extension material to aid learners of Cornish. For Cornish language resources that can be used in schools. We also intend to publish on our website the best entries in our various competitions.

Editor-in-Chief is Ian Jackson. Graphic Designer is Nigel Roberts. We would like to assemble a creative team, appointing a number of specialized editors, including a photographic editor responsible for the provision of high quality images. Please contact us if you wish to apply: iacobianus@googlemail.com

Articles may be submitted in any form of revived Cornish and in any spelling. Or in English. Cornish language material will be published either in Standard Cornish (KS) spelling or in the Standard Written Form with traditional graphs (SWF-T) according to the preference of the contributor. Articles may occasionally appear in other spellings that are consistent with historical tradition. Paid advertisements will be published in any recognized spelling.

We plan to distribute copies of the first issue free of charge. If you would like to register for a free copy, subject to availability, please email us your postal address:
