DEAR KHETHELO

"Homosexuality," "Asperger's Disorder,"

When a tribal father, Gobimpisi Mbonambi, heard these words for the first time in his house they were foreign to him, so he rejected anything and everything that came with them. As the leader and headman of KwaShayinja warriors, his sons were a reflection of his leadership. Why did his first son, Nzululwazi, brutally murdered him and buried his body next to the fresh grave of his little brother? The whole country was eager to know, his trial became the most-talked about and invited the undivided attention of a high-ranking minister with a tottering reputation to affix.

Seven years later a student from the buzzing streets of Inanda Township, Khethelo Thabethe, is desperate to build her profile in the Psychology industry. Luckily the House Of Hope & Recovery has been looking for volunteers, she travels to Isithebe Industrial Estate to help victims of trauma deal with their nightmares and rebuild themselves. Among them is the once-condemned psychopathic killer who killed his own father and buried him, for the first time in her life Khethelo has doubts about the career path she's chosen. He's wearing a black hoodie that's pulled over his forehead, there's a scar peeking from the bottom of his left cheek. He's intimidating, not only because he's too dark with his nightmarish brown eyes, but he looks indubitably ill-natured as well.

What is it going to take for him to tell his side of the story? Can she break down the walls around him?

He's unsociable and not vocally skilled in expressing himself. But maybe there's another way...a letter.

Dear Khethelo; The psychopathic killer pens down his life for the first time in 27 years.

MULALO - THE MASTERPIECE (BOOK 3)

'The Masterpiece' is a moving tale of overcoming, surrendering and awakening. A year has passed since Mulalo narrowly escaped spending her life in prison for the murder of a crime intelligence officer and lover, Orlando. She finally does the right thing by becoming a state-witness against a self-proclaimed prophet.

A devastating loss forces Mulalo to question her true purpose in life. Her romantic life has always been in shambles, but now she is caught between two men, one is the symbol of a perfect family man and the other is unpredictable. While she must choose who she wants to spend the rest of her life with, she is faced with an even greater challenge. Overcoming her past traumas and awakening to who she truly is becoming. Will Mulalo ever find her happily-ever-after, or will something else much bigger find her.

Following the captivating Novels 'The Politician Book 1' and 'The First Lady Book 2', 'The Masterpiece' is the third book in Khathu Maestro's page-turning drama series.

A BURNING DESIRE

Have you ever desired something so much that everything else does not matter? A burning desire is all about two hearts, two life journeys, and burning desires that cannot be ignored. One desires an unending love, while the other desires to fulfill a promise made to their loved ones.

When Lesedi Mashaba and Phuluso Tshifularo met, they were drawn to each other since the minute they laid their eyes on each other. Both of them are in their life journeys and pursuing a relationship was not part of the plan. But when they both least expected, Phuluso became the man Lesedi has always been looking for—respectful, loyal and a dedicated family man. In the midst of their perfect relationship, Phuluso is pulled back into a pit of darkness he cannot ignore. A pit he had been digging for years. Since the death of his twin sister, he desired to put justice in his hands when the law failed him. Will his love for Lesedi change his mind and his life around? Will he find solace in her arms? Or will he chose to jump into the pit of darkness where there is no return?

SABATHA THE BEGETTER

The man didn't give us any instructions. He said everything is up to me and asked that we step out and allow more serious seekers to come in. "I'm not sure who you are anymore," Mbuso says. I was hoping that we'd drive home in peace. I need time to process everything the man has just told me. "Not now Shenge. Don't put me on the stand now. I need to do what I'm supposed to do before things get out of control," I say. "Her catching a random bullet, was it because of your darkness?" He's staring at me. Talk about kicking the dog when it's already down! I don't know," I say. "You don't know, Sabatha? Everything has consequences. You go around killing people and fucking new widows and you think it won't affect you? Then you associate yourself with that innocent girl and rub everything onto her? Now you don't know how we do things in our culture? A piece of paper from UniZulu has made you forget who you are and how you should carry yourself? Huh?" I'm not having this conversation now. I understand that he's disappointed and angry. But we are on the road for fuck' sake, there's time and place for everything. He starts and switches off the engine. He's not done lashing out on me. "Whose blood is in your hands?" "Samkelo Myeni. I killed him, he didn't fall off the stairs," I say.

UNOMZAMO

"I, Nomzamo Happiness Ndaba, do solemnly swear to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth," I chant after the prosecutor. "So help me God," she says with much confidence. "So help me God," I repeat after her and I am allowed to sit down, like everyone else in the jury. She smiles briefly at me and then nods curtly prior to moving back to her desk where she had left all her sheets of paper. She remains smiling at me like she is up to something. I thought I knew him. I thought he knew me as his better half. I thought he loved me as such. I mean when I said 'I do' all those years ago, I meant it with every fibre of my being. With every corner of my flash. It wasn't until I met that crazy woman that I questioned my place as a wife in his life. I questioned my place in this union. "I love you," became a mantra, and then a phrase to avoid addressing issues within our marriage and then just three meaningless words. He loves me, I can tell by the way he still remembers the little details about me. I'm not sure if we're still compatible though. "You're my wife." Until I become his punching bag.

LOVING IN MIDRAND

Thirty-one-year-old Anele Gumede has vowed that engaging in a relationship in Midrand is the equivalent of an extreme sports tournament. After moving back home to Soweto in the hopes of rebuilding her strength from a breakup, it does not take her long to find new love that sends her back to Midrand with Mbuso Khumalo. Her life brings more complexities when she has to deal with Lerato, Mbuso's ex-girlfriend who is currently pregnant with their first child and is determined to do anything to have him back in her life and complete her picture-perfect family.

Thando Kunene, a successful investment banker who also happens to be next-door neighbours with Anele from back in Soweto, finds himself entangled in this love predicament when they all rebuild their lives in Midrand. Loving in Midrand proves that relationships built in Midrand are not for the faint-hearted. Do these four have what it takes to break the cycle and live in cordial harmony in a town where many relationships have gone to die?

Adelaide, The Royal Mistress is the second instalment of The Royal Mistress sequel. It follows an interesting life of a princess, Rotshidzwa, who doesn't believe in love but is given an ultimatum to get married to a prince in order to access her father's estate. Adelaide, The Royal Mistress is the second book of The Royal Mistress sequel. The first book ended at a will-reading of the late Chief Ratshali. On his will, he gave his daughter an ultimatum to marry an arranged prince so that she could be tamed by love. The princess needed the money to fund her lifestyle, so she faked her marriage with the prince. After putting on a facade for a perfect marriage with a loving prince, she ended up failing in love with him. Love was foreign to her but she was willing to take on the challenge without acknowledging the prince's relationship with a woman called Adelaide. The love triangle came with bitterness and betrayal, forcing Adelaide to prove to the lawyer that the marriage arrangements between the princess and the prince is a facade and cannot be considered as legit according to the conditions of the will.
