These risks need to be transferred to a reinsurer to ensure that the business could still run and survive. With that, the first thing that you need to do is to make an arrangement with the reinsurance company. It would allow you to transfer a portion of the company's obligations and the risks. In return, the accepting company (reinsurer) acquires a premium and pays the claim for what it undertakes from your business.Step 2: Clearly Define the ObligationsAn insurance company can only manage its overall financial risk exposure when it transfers a part of it to a reinsurer. Hence, a cession statement serves as a document that explains and defines the clear-cut obligations of both parties. The reinsurer must have a clear and logical layout of the duties before it even takes the risk from your business. One way to do that is by defining all of them clearly in your cession statement.Step 3: Keep it Simple Yet SpecificAnother thing to keep in mind is you need to make your cession statement as specific and straightforward as possible. When you write an arrangement vaguely, the other party might interpret it differently. Miscommunication usually leads to disintegrations and delays. If you can express and explain your objectives and obligations in a precise and specific manner, the better.Step 4: Get a TemplateIt gives more than just an assurance when we have a template or two with us to help us draft a cession statement.
