What is the Future of Work?

The arrival of the COVID-19 pandemic made the world sharply aware of how important it is to be able to successfully adapt to the unexpected. To embrace resilience, companies need to have employees who are strong and skilled – who feel valued and supported. And who are empowered with technologies and solutions that help them work with efficiency and confidence. The future of work is arriving fast for many companies that are using innovative ideas and solutions to transform their workplaces, workforces, and the nature of work itself.

Vusela Risk Services invests in SAP Business One from 4most

With integration key, Vusela Risk Services set out to find a solution capable of integrating across all of its various departments and divisions. "We wanted a single and consolidated view of data across the entire company, in real-time," stresses Du Plooy. This would provide Vusela Risk Services with access to the exact status of each and every facet of its growing business, providing the capability for timeous decisions and strategic alignment.
