Garden of Blessings * GROWTH

That which happens in secret and in its time produces fruit.
2 Peter 3:18

Recently we have planted a garden. It is amazing to think that those very small seeds might actually sprout and eventually turn into fruit-bearing plants! In a spiritual sense, it is what happens when we spend time in "secret" and wait for God to bring forth fruit in our personal life. In ministry, it is just being faithful in the little things and waiting for God's time to produce the fruit of salvation and spiritual maturity. In our family, it's God working in each of our lives and praying for that fruit in our children.

Here are some lessons that we can learn from our garden.

* Things planted take time and patience to grow

This is especially true as we continue to do virtual services and have limited contact with our brothers and sisters in Christ. Sam continues to minister and administer both the church and seminary. He has kept busy with frequent zoom meetings and emergency home visits. Beth continues to work with the children in the homeschool group both virtually and personally.

Things planted bring joy when we see beautiful results.

There have been beautiful ways in which the Lord has been working. Sam has had the opportunity to preach Christ in three different funerals in the past month. One was a 9-year-old girl who had leukemia, a 21-year-old with heart trouble, and an older Christian woman who suffered a stroke several years ago. On each occasion, the gospel was clearly presented. We are also very excited to see our children adapt to a virtual ministry as they prepare beautiful specials for the glory of God and for the enjoyment of us all.

Future plantings.

Lord willing, we will be able to meet soon as a church. We are truly praying for the day to come when we can once again worship in a corporate body. We are planning a virtual Christmas program, which we hope, will bring joy and some Christmas spirit to many. We are also praying about 12 days until Christmas evangelistic program that we did last year that will also bring the gospel and hope to many unsaved. Please pray with us that God will use these things for His honor and glory and that the gospel will reach many especially during these uncertain times.

We really appreciate your prayers for us during this time. Thank you for your continued support and encouragement.
