

The Departure

A long time he sat by the window transfixed, watching his reflection dance like a devil on the panes.

“I’m going,” she said. And she left.

He did not try to stop her. She did not look back.

Stepping out into the cloudless day, her shadow did not follow her.

Previously published in 50 Give or Take #822 (2023).